that the Director of Student Affairs/Activities participated in the Association of Campus Activities Administrators in-service on Friday, December 14, 2001, which was held at the Chicago Cultural Center. The presentation and round table discussion were based on the book, Making the Most of College Students Speak Their Minds by R.J. Light, which addresses how faculty and staff can enhance learning on college campuses today. The five topics included "The Crucial First Weeks" (they are not those of actual class meetings but those of students' Way" (Actually getting out of the way of talented students), "Building A Campus Culture" (may include two or three year advance planning), "Leaders of Student Groups" (Club coalitions), and "A policy of Inclusion" (sets the tone of the campus and provides for students' evolution of thinking during their time at college). sharing their small group views on the above, each group responded to the following questions: (1) What choices can students make to get the most out of college? (2) What are effective ways for faculty members and campus leaders to translate good intentions to For the Spring 2002 term, the Director of Student practice? Affairs/Activities will incorporate suggestions such as more active club coalition support, more activities for new students' introduction to the campus, and continued building of a campus culture, which now includes three divisions.

Respectfully submitted,
