STUDENT WINS NATIONAL SPEECH TITLE
TRUMAN COLLEGE

THE CHANCELLOR

REPORTS that Truman College graduate Sandra Pollus won $500 in the spring edition of a semiannual national public speaking contest sponsored by textbook publisher McGraw-Hill; and that according to contest sponsors, her entry, a video of a 2005 speech on Chicago's public smoking ban, easily bested the more than 200 other entries; and that she will now compete against the winner of the fall McGraw-Hill speech contest, the winner to earn a paid trip to the National Communication Association National Conference in San Antonio, TX; and that Ms. Pollus' speech, which won third place in Truman's annual Speak Up public speaking contest, was submitted by her instructor, Speak Up creator Franklin Reynolds.

Respectfully submitted,

Wayne D. Watson
Chancellor
