THE CHANCELLOR

REPORTS

that Malcolm X College hosted Chicago Science in the City 2008: The Science of Sports. The event showcased the importance of science and technology in our daily lives and was designed to encourage young people to pursue science education. The interactive and hands-on event engaged participants of all ages to discover the scientific principles behind many athletic activities such as baseball, skating, tennis, just to name a few. A broad range of experts and athletes were on hand to discuss the importance of science in sports events and training, and in sports-related careers.

that the event involved over 30 different organizations from Chicago's science and sports communities and was sponsored by the City of Chicago, World Sports Chicago, Chicago Public Schools the Chicago Park District, City Colleges of Chicago and Science Chicago.
