CHI-TOWN PRAISES TRUMAN STUDENT, CCC SCIENCE PROGRAM
TRUMAN COLLEGE

THE CHANCELLOR

REPORTS

that the Chi-Town Daily News ran a report October 7 on the success of Truman student Lynika Strozier and fellow students at Wright thanks to the City Colleges of Chicago's Undergraduate Research Collaborative (URC) with support from the National Science Foundation; and that the program provides the opportunity to do hands-on research with institutions like the University of Chicago and Youngstown State University in Ohio; and that CCC is the only community college system in the nation taking part in the project; and that thanks to the program, Ms. Strozier is now a junior at Dominican University in River Forest, IL where she has her sights set on a bachelor's degree in biology and a doctorate in cell biology.

Respectfully submitted,

Wayne D. Watson
Chancellor
