Building Energy Technologies Program Wins Mayor's 2007 Green Works Award Wright College

The Chancellor

Reports: that on November 29, 2007, Wilbur Wright College's Building Energy Technologies Occupational Certificate Program was presented with Mayor Daley's prestigious 2007 Green Works Award in the Green Practices category. The Green Works Awards recognize public and private entities that exemplify outstanding responsibility in the environmental and energy fields, and serve to promote Chicago as one of the nation's greenest metropolises.

that the Building Energy Technologies curriculum program began offering classes at Wright in the Fall Semester of 2006. The Award was presented for its progressive six-course, 21-credit hour syllabus, as well as for the 2007 installations of renewable energy technologies (including solar water heating and photovoltaic systems) on campus, which have provided an experiential learning environment for the program's students.

Respectfully submitted,

Wayne D. Watson
Chancellor
