HOME WEATHERIZATION CONTRACTORS WORKSHOP AT WRIGHT COLLEGE

THE CHANCELLOR

REPORTS that on April 6, 2009, the Community and Economic Development Association (CEDA) of Cook County, Inc., the organization responsible for low income home weatherization in the county, teamed with the Environmental Technology and Building Energy Technologies Programs at Wright College to offer a full-day technical workshop to residential construction and rehab contractors on insulation, air sealing, and quality assurance techniques aimed at improving home energy efficiency. As a feature of this partnership between CEDA and Wright, students, graduates, and instructors of the Building Energy Technologies program were invited to attend the training along with CEDA's private sector contractors. An ongoing relationship between CEDA and Wright is expected to result in additional technical training workshops.

Respectfully submitted,

Wayne D. Watson
