REPORTS

that on October 14, 2009, the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC) concluded its three-day site review of the Malcolm X College Child Development Program. At the conclusion of the review, site visitors reported that of the twenty standards examined, the Malcolm X College Child Development program exceeded in seventeen standards, met two of the standards and has one standard that required improvement. The site reviewers reported that the Malcolm X College Child Development Program has the most advanced rubrics and assessment plan that the accreditation body had ever examined on a site visit. The full report from the site review will be sent to the Malcolm X College Child Development program in December and NAEYC's decision on the Child Development program accreditation will be announced sometime in the Spring of 2010.

Respectfully submitted,

Deidra J. Lewis
