Appellate Court Justices Present Virtual Trial
KENNEDY-KING COLLEGE

THE CHANCELOR

REPORTS

that Appellate Court Justice P. Scott Neville, Jr. moved the criminal justice bench to the internet for an exclusive mock trial that involved students from Kennedy-King College, Culver-Stockton College in Canton, Missouri, and Quincy University in Quincy, Illinois. Dr. Jaami Dawan, Master Online Teacher (MOT) and Instructional Design Manager for the Center for Distance Learning coordinated the event with the assistance of the Kennedy-King College IT team lead by Mr. Stanley Young and the Media Communications Department under the direction of Ms. Kiana Battle.

that Justice Joy V. Cunningham and Justice Nathaniel R, Howse, Jr., accompanied by several 3rd year University of Chicago Law students, argued People v. Wead. The experience provided participants with a unique, interactive "mock trial" re-enactment of how our criminal justice system works. Participants also viewed a video produced by the National Bar Association that encouraged minority students and women to pursue legal careers.

Respectfully submitted,

Deidra J. Lewis
