County of Cook and State of Illinois

4TH Annual Spring Lecture Series
HAROLD WASHINGTON COLLEGE

THE CHANCELLOR

REPORTS

that on six consecutive Thursdays (May 13, 20, 27, June 3, 10 and 17) the Center for Creative Aging at Harold Washington College presented its fourth annual Spring Lecture Series in the Community Room of the College, and;

that the Series, entitled “So We’ll Live to Be 100...Now What?”, included four lectures and two panel discussions dealing with the personal and social implications of life’s increasing longevity, and;

that Jerry Roper, President of the Chicagoland Chamber of Commerce, served as moderator of a unique panel comprised of men and women ranging in ages from 89 to 98 entitled “The Real Deal: Chicagoans over 85 Speak on the Challenges and Rewards of Life After 85;” and that all other speakers and panelists were Chicago experts in the field of aging, and;

that the total attendance at the combined six events was 550, an average of 92 guests per lecture, and;

that those who attended were overwhelmingly enthusiastic about the Summer Series as a whole and about the individual speakers and panels.

Respectfully submitted,

Cheryl L. Hyman
Chancellor
