BIOLOGY PROFESSOR SELECTED TO PRESENT AT “10TH ANNUAL LILLY CONFERENCE”
Harold Washington College

THE CHANCELLOR

REPORTS

that on September 25th, 2010, Professor Farahnaz Movahedzadeh received the opportunity to give a presentation on “Biology for Non-Science Majors, is there a better way to teach it?” at the 10th Annual Lilly Conference on College and University Teaching and Learning, which was held at the Park Place Hotel, Traverse city, Michigan, and;

that the Lilly Conference on College and University Teaching – Traverse City brought together faculty from a variety of disciplines and at various stages of their academic careers to share new advances in teaching and learning, and;

that in order to be selected as a presenter at the conference, scholars and educators submitted high-quality proposals and the final selection of presentations was through peer review process, and;

that Lilly Conferences have provided opportunities for the presentation of the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning for over 25 years, and;

that participants come from a multitude of disciplines throughout the US and abroad.

Respectfully submitted,

Cheryl L. Hyman
