THE CHANCELLOR

REPORTS

that Wright College collaborated and partnered with Chicago Academy High School and The Chicago Academy to form a Community School with a new name: "The Chicago Academy Campus Community School." Its vision is "enriching the lives of students and their families by building relationships and bridges to community resources and promoting the quality of life." To service youth in middle through high school, this partnership and funding by the Illinois Department of Human Services birthed Teen REACH "to expand the range of choices and opportunities that enable, empower and encourage youth to achieve positive growth and development, improve expectations and capacities for future success, and avoid and/or reduce risk-taking behavior."

Respectfully Submitted
